

Why do entire dogs fight?

Undesexed dogs generally fight for one main reason.....the right to reproduce.

Some entire bitches cannot tolerate other entire Bitches at any time; other entire bitches will only not tolerate other entire bitches when they are in heat / season.

Some are perfectly fine.

It is a similar case with entire males, however they seem to be known for being more toey, for example, they can become reactive just seeing other males.

Some don't have a care in the world.

Many agree that bitches fight worse than dogs (male dogs) and that bitches have been known to kill other bitches.

It is recommended that if you are going to keep undesexed dogs of the same sex that you have them separated when you cannot supervise and be prepared for the fact that they may not even be able to be around each other when you are home.

Some breeders have gone many years having their dogs out together with no problems and then one day out of the blue a massive fight breaks out that can be difficult to break up and can have devastating results such as serious injuries that could be permanent, or even death.
